Damen Verolme

Damen Verolme yard can accommodate any seagoing vessel. Main services are dry-docking, repair and maintenance, modifications, conversions and constructions.

Damen Verolme Rotterdam (DVR) has been an active ship repair yard since 1957 and is situated in close proximity to the North Sea, in the Port of Rotterdam, the Netherlands. This yard is well known for its drydocking, repair and maintenance capabilities and has a long track record of modification and conversion of upstream offshore units.

On June 30th, 2017, the yard was acquired by the Damen Shipyards Group and became a Damen Shiprepair & Conversion (DSC) company. This acquisition means an increase in offshore market capacity for DSC. The yard can accommodate any seagoing vessel or floating offshore unit. Recently, the yard diversified by adding offshore unit decommissioning to its services.

The shipyard has a rich history and is proud to retain the Verolme name. Mr. Cornelis Verolme started building the large drydock in Rotterdam's Botlek area in 1970. The 405 x 90m graven drydock can easily accommodate rigs, semi-submersibles and jack-ups as well as the largest vessels in the world. The two other graven docks cater to the larger vessels sailing the globe.

Damen Anchor and Chain Factory (AKF)

As Damen and Chain Factory describes "... our story began in 1932 with the forming of the Anchor & Chain Factory in Schiedam. At the heart of the Rotterdam port area, this location was an ideal setting to provide our manufacturing skills to the ever-growing Maritime Market. Due to the Company's expansion, we moved to larger premises in Vlaardingen half a Century, later.

After the acquisition of Vlaardingen Oost Shiprepair by the Damen Shipyards Group we returned to Schiedam in 2005, under the new name of AKF. By joining the Damen family, AKF experienced new opportunities for growth that were reflected in the move to the Damen Shiprepair Rotterdam site. This is where we operate today as an independent business."

- AKF's wide range of anchors in stock allows to quickly respond to your vessel downtime. With guaranteed quality and Customer focus.
- AKF stock an extensive range of anchor chains and related accessories, all complying with IACS classification societies.
- AKF's portfolio includes custom-built and type approved towing equipment to meet all your specifications. All fully certified.
